...LINGERING SNOW COVERED ROADS AND SLICK SPOTS WITH COLD CONDITIONS

TONIGHT...

After the snow comes to an end, some roads may remain snow-covered or slick through tonight. Some patchy blowing snow may cause snow to blow back onto previously-cleared roads, allowing for potential slick spots to linger longer than would otherwise be the case. Exercise caution if driving through tonight.

Additionally, wind chill values around zero are expected tonight into early Wednesday morning. Bundle up in layers and avoid prolonged time outdoors, if possible.

Including the cities of Kenton, Ada, Wapakoneta, St. Marys, New Bremen, Minster, Bellefontaine, Marysville, Delaware, Urbana, Downtown Columbus, Newark, Lancaster, and Pickerington
...ACCUMULATING SNOW THIS EVENING...

Snow showers found along a northwest to southeast line are tracking over the same areas this evening. A quick quarter to half inch of snow will make for potentially dangerous driving conditions, especially as temperatures drop this evening and overnight. Visibilities will also decrease to under a mile in some places, creating another hazard to area commuters.

As of 8:00 this evening, this line runs roughly from Wapakoneta, to Bellefontaine. Another line extends from Delaware to Pataskala and then south to Baltimore. This includes the northeastern suburbs of Columbus. Additional accumulations may be found later this evening if similar lines of showers continue to develop.

National Weather Service Wilmington OH

Franklin-Licking-Fairfield-
Including the cities of Downtown Columbus, Newark, Lancaster, and Pickerington
...RAPID SHOT OF ACCUMULATING SNOW...

Snow showers over the area are moving southeast and will produce a quarter to half inch of snow as they cross the area. This will result in reduced visibilities and potentially dangerous driving conditions on snow covered roadways.

As of 9:15, the strongest shower was located from south of Johnstown to Pataskala to near Reynoldsburg. It will move southeast into northern and northeastern Fairfield county and affect Millersport and Buckeye Lake.

...LIGHT SNOW EXPECTED MID TO LATE MORNING...

Light snow will move across the region mid to late morning. While accumulations are expected to be generally around an inch or less, the snow may cause some brief slick spots on roads, especially untreated ones, as well as bridges and overpasses. The snow rates may briefly be heavy enough to allow for accumulation on warm road surfaces before some melting occurs once the heaviest snow comes to an end. Reduced visibility and light snow accumulations are expected before tapering off to isolated to scattered snow showers this afternoon.
